Handing the lines to a lady who was with him, he bestrode a saddle horse that he was leading and gave chase; he caught the runaway about a mile further on, rode up to the side, caught the horse into a wire fence, almost one of the lines and, in the dark, pulled the horse into a wire fence, almost crippling himself and cutting and bruising both horses; he finally succeeded in getting the fractions brute fastened to a fence, then went back for his partner and hurried on to town to report his find, not knowing what had become of the occupants of the cart. The family was notified and Hon. J. started out on horseback to find his brother, but had not proceeded far when the horse stumbled and fell, throwing him headlong, but breaking no bones. The borse tore a hole in his knee, that will make him a cripple for life. In this demoralized condition the life. Wasp and company came to a very thin audience last night with Inshavougae. Because Salt lake had treated them so shabbilly, our theatre-goers went with a resolve to uphoid the good went with a resolve to upnoin the good name of the Territory, if possible, but nothing could stand before the scene where a patriotic Irishman laughs fit to kill with a distressed woman on-either had. Patience almost swore at such mockery. However, the play gained its feet a time or two afterward, and interest was reviewelly agonts. Some and interest was revived in spots, Some of the situations brought down the galleries, but the plot was execually thin. The memory of last night's per-

Not much less than a doesn have trampired here-abouts in the last week, in which a toe, or a finger or a thumb have been lost or a finger or a tutanto have been lost, but perhaps the saddest is one in which a young boy named Byron Doolan lost his hand. Last Sunday a company of boys went up Rock Canyon, and while playing around a sawmill young Doolan carelessly threw his hand against the saw. The sum at the back of the wrist was all that held the hand in place was all that held the hand in place After being brought to town the young man was waited upon by Prs. First they call for our handsome color sheets and pick out the tint they desire for a porch, a gate, a room or any other place that needs it.
